OPENING REMARKS OF NRC CHAIRMAN GREGORY B. JACZKO AT TODAY'S BRIEFING TO THE COMMISSION FROM THE OFFICE OF HUMAN RESOURCES AND OFFICE OF SMALL BUSINESS AND CIVIL RIGHTS

Good morning. The Commission meets today to receive its annual briefing from the Office of Human Resources (HR) and the Office of Small Business and Civil Rights (SBCR). The NRC has a diverse, talented, and well-trained workforce, and that is in no small part due to the hard work of the HR and SBCR staffs.

We will discuss a number of important initiatives designed to benefit NRC employees, including professional development opportunities and work/life programs. All of these programs are geared towards ensuring that the NRC continues to be both a great place to work, and ultimately a place that does great work. Whether through our extensive training programs, our open, collaborative working environment, or our work/life balance initiatives, I believe the staff has done very good work in this area. These initiatives have helped us become a stronger team and a more effective regulator.
